Turning over a new Leaf

Reports say Ron Wilson will be in Toronto this week to put his signature on a four-year deal to take over as head coach of the Toronto Maple Leafs. Wilson (inset) was drafted by the Leafs in 1975. He broke into the NHL with Toronto in 1977-78 and played 64 games with the Leafs. Story, page 14.

Battling poverty

Liberals asking public for input at meetings across the province

Social activists are calling it Super Monday in the provincial fight against poverty.

Toronto-area Liberals are holding three public meetings across the city tonight for the public to weigh in on the McGuinty government's plan to draft a poverty-reduction strategy with measurable goals and timetables by year's end.

Activists see the meetings, which are being held in ridings across the province this month, as the public's chance to let local MPPs know there is broad backing for the effort and to bolster Liberal caucus support for a strategy with teeth.

"We want to position this as a positive leadership issue," said Peter Clutterbuck of the Ontario Social Planning Network, which has been helping MPPs set up consultations.

"But we also want them to know we will be measuring their plan against our call to reduce poverty by 25 per cent in five years," said Clutterbuck, who is also a member of the 25-in-5 Network for Poverty Reduction.

"We want to encourage MPPs to move forward with this and to let them know the public is behind them — everyone from faith communities, chambers of commerce, health-care workers, educators, as well as the community sector," said Clutterbuck. The group hopes all cabinet ministers and key Liberal backbenchers as well as prominent opposition members will hold consultations.

25-in-5 goal

» At a Queen's Park forum in April, the 25-in-5 Network for Poverty Reduction urged the Liberals to adopt the 25-in-5 goal and focus on three broad areas: Sustainable employment, livable income support, and community investment.

The meetings with MPPs are in addition to the government's official public consultations at 14 invitation-only gatherings with Children's Minister Deb Matthews, who heads the government's poverty reduction cabinet committee.

Matthews said she has no plans to produce a report on her consultations and needs to use the summer and fall to "get to work on building the strategy."

However, activists are posting reports on meetings with MPPs at povertywatchontario.ca.

All playground, no barriers

Prince launches city's first fully accessible play area

To Clayton Trovato, a 12-year-old boy from Oakville, yesterday was a day of double happiness.

He said hello to and shook hands with Prince Edward, the youngest child of the Queen and Prince Phillip. And he was looking forward to a playground in the Yonge Street and Davisville Avenue area where he will be able to hang out with his friends who use a wheelchair.

Prince Edward, Lt.-Gov. David Onley and Mayor David Miller planted a maple tree to launch Neshama Playground, a universal accessible playground to be built at Oriole Park. Community leaders and children attended the ceremony.

Neshama, meaning "good soul" in Hebrew, will have ramps for wheelchairs and different heights for play structures. So far, nearly $700,000 has been raised of the $1-million target.

"In a perfect world, all playgrounds should be this way. As former chair of provincial accessibility standards advisory council for Ontario, (I believe) the launch of this park is an important milestone," said Onley.

Prince Edward lauded the people behind the idea and actions of building Neshama for it is always hard to start a project when it is only on paper. "I know towards activities like this, there are always people who would say 'I am not too sure about it ... I don't know I want it.' But I know there is one group of people who want it to be done," said Prince Edward.

CAW invokes defunct deal

The Canadian Auto Workers union has asked the federal opposition parties to press the minority Conservative government for a trade action that would force General Motors to keep a truck plant open in Oshawa next year.

Union president Buzz Hargrove told about 1,000 workers and supporters yesterday at a blockade of GM's Canadian headquarters in Oshawa that the government should make the company abide by the terms of the defunct Auto Pact.

letters to parties

» Hargrove said he will send letters to the opposition parties this week in the union's continuing fight to save the plant.

The 1965 pact laid the foundation for Canada's modern auto industry by calling on manufacturers to produce one vehicle here for every one they sold in the country or face stiff duties.

The pact disappeared in 2001 when the World Trade Organization ruled some provisions broke global regulations for the fair movement of goods between all countries.

U.S. war resister allowed to stay in Canada longer

He was told to have his bags packed by Thursday, but it appears U.S. war resister Corey Glass will remain in Canada for at least another month.

Initially ordered to leave the country by June 12, Glass' departure date has been extended to July 10, after a month-long appeal process by his lawyer was finally approved last week.

The former American soldier was set to become the first Iraq War resister to be deported from Canada.

Last week, all three opposition parties in the House of Commons passed a motion urging the government to allow U.S. military deserters and their families to remain in Canada as permanent residents — instead of deporting them to face possible jail time. The motion passed 137-110, but it is non-binding.

Female gorilla brought from Seattle to Toronto

RICK EGLINTON/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Ngozi, a female gorilla, was brought in from Seattle's Woodland Park Zoo for future breeding with Charles, a male gorilla at the Toronto Zoo.

Their union was planned months ago. Wiser animals than they scrutinized genetic lines to ensure the pairing — at least on paper — would be fruitful. A repeat of what had happened a decade ago could not happen again. There was too much at stake.

It helped Ngozi was a beauty. Just 10 years of age, her ebony eyes hinted at hidden depths, and the thick dark hair all over her lithe 190-pound body rippled with health as she moved. Born and bred in the Woodland Park Zoo in Seattle, she caught the eyes of many there.

She was quiet on the day she left. Shipped in a wooden crate, she managed to hear her handlers speaking of a place called "Toronto." Strong as she was, realizing she would not see her family again, she wept openly, her only sign of discomfort, a gentle crying that broke the hearts of those around her.

She was off to meet the male intended to be the love of her life.

Charles had his own pedigree. A large silverback, he was brought to the Toronto Zoo from the wilderness of Gabon as a baby. He quickly adopted the role of "protector" of his small family and, over the years, he would earn a reputation for his alpha-male dominance and breeding record. Although in the sunset of his life, his masters fully expected him to be able to produce yet another heir — should Ngozi be so inclined, of course.

> «The meeting of Charles and Ngozi has yet to take place. But already the handlers of both are optimistic babies will be forthcoming.»

The meeting of Charles and Ngozi has yet to take place. But already the handlers of both are optimistic babies will be forthcoming.

It has been three months since Ngozi's arrival. She's seen her future mate, but they have yet to touch — a clear partition has always been in the way. She has heard him socialize, they have even eaten together, albeit through the double barrier of plastic and mesh. Curiously, she has seen moving images of Charles — and his two wives and their offspring — images displayed on what she heard described as a "television." Their life plots are fascinating when compared to the story lines of the other brighter, animated images she has also watched.

The fateful meeting between Charles and Ngozi will not take place for weeks. First she has to meet his wives, Samantha and Josephine.

Will Charles love her? Will the wives accept her? Will she be happy here? And, most importantly, will she produce offspring?

Can you see PM's vision?

Even Tories close to Harper can't put finger on agenda

The "vision thing" — as the first U.S. president George Bush so famously dismissed it — is the looming question as the Canadian political season draws to an end and parties head out for a summer of politicking and planning.

Two and a half years after Stephen Harper's Conservatives took power, even those closest to him are at a loss to detail what is the Prime Minister's vision for leading the country.

During a recent conversation, two senior Tory sources first scoffed, then shrugged off a question about what vision or narrative will take the government through to October 2009, when by law an election will be held if it's not triggered earlier by a non-confidence vote.

"The vision thing?" said one. "Vision's often overrated. People don't vote on vision, per se."

Liberals lash out over Tory ads

POLITICS Stephen Harper's Conservative party has released a series of sneering radio and gas-pump ads that portray the Liberal environmental plan as a massive tax grab — even though they haven't seen the blueprint.

Liberals shot back yesterday by suggesting the Tories are paying Canada's large oil and gas companies to bombard motorists at the pumps with an environmentally irresponsible message.

"Now the relationship is publicly consummated," said Liberal environment critic David McGuinty. "For 20 years, Mr. Harper has been in the pocket of big oil. . . .

"The fact that he's putting voices for the Conservative party in gas stations just confirms what we already know." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Junk items found in airport scanners

Screening officers at Canada's airports who ask passengers to empty their pockets have been given a stern warning: Stop emptying your own pockets in the X-ray machines.

Maintenance technicians have found a heap of garbage inside the expensive machines, which are used to scan hand luggage, purses, jackets and other items for potential weapons.

The junk they've extracted from the units includes candy wrappers, coins, paper clips, metal keys, hair clips — even utility knife blades, the very type of weapon the X-ray units are supposed to detect.

"Continued inspections across the country have revealed that garbage and other items ... are still being dropped inside the top panel openings of some X-ray machines," says a bulletin issued earlier this year by the Canadian Air Transport Security Authority.

The rebuke is the second time officers have been warned about dropping junk into the X-ray scanners.

Film guns in real action

Firearms for use in movies ending up with criminals

Guns intended for make-believe action on the silver screen are winding up in the hands of real-life criminals due to a "loophole" in Canadian laws, says an RCMP intelligence report.

Some firearms dealers in British Columbia have taken advantage of movie production companies filming in various Canadian locations, says the newly declassified report on trends in gun trafficking and smuggling.

'legislative and procedural gaps'

» The intelligence report says the lack of a definitive time period for registering guns is among various "legislative and procedural gaps" being exploited by criminal elements. For instance, some firearms are disabled and removed from the Canadian gun registry, only to be swiftly reactivated for use on the street.

Special permits allow these companies to legally buy firearms in bulk internationally and import them to Canada for use on their movie sets. The gun dealers act as middlemen between the foreign suppliers and the production companies to help import the firearms.

"In this process, these dealers have exploited a loophole in the Canadian firearms legislation, which specifies that firearms must be registered as soon as practicable," says the November 2007 report, obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act.

"However, there is no exact time frame defined, allowing the dealers to circumvent the registration process and keep the firearms. Frequently, these firearms end up on the streets of Canada after being sold in illicit markets."

In December 2006, a Burnaby, B.C., company with a licence to import guns for use in the film industry was busted for alleged illegal distribution of deadly submachine guns. And last year police traced two assault rifles used in a January 2007 shootout in Richmond, B.C., to another B.C. firm with a movie import licence.

eBay Sellers are Making $10,000+ a Month

By Frances M. Kelsey

Why settle for mediocre pay and long hours when it is possible to make over $100,000 a year from the comfort of your home?

Over 170 million people are registered eBay users and 1.3 million are making a full-time living through online auctioning, leaving their everyday jobs.

Duane Barney, online auction expert, is one of many people who have left the mundane aspect of a 9-to-5 desk job and begun to make his own income at home with the help of his children. Now Barney is making around $10,000 a month by selling a variety of items that can be found in his home.

"People shouldn't wait until they find themselves out of a job before they find out they are not financially secure," Barney said. "They should start ensuring their own and their family's financial future immediately."

Not only does eBay allow people to make money and get rid of some things that may no longer be of use, there are more benefits than cash. If a seller can make $1,000 a month or more, they can qualify for most of the same benefits that are available to a regular 9-to-5 job, such as health, vision and dental. Over 200,000 members of eBay qualify for these benefits and more.

Not only does using eBay at home cut back on paying for gas and having to deal with the hassle of rush hour traffic, but also consumer demands through the Internet are continually growing, allowing for a higher income rate per seller.

According to a speech given by former Senior Vice President of Products Development, Lynn Reddy, on average one car is sold every two minutes, a car part or accessory sold every three seconds, diamond jewelry every eighty-three seconds, and a pair of Timberland shoes every ten minutes. These items and more, from concert tickets to stamps and coins, are sold daily by average people looking to gain an income or better their current cash flow.

"Anybody can do it if they know the right technique," Barney said. "With the right techniques it's easy to make extra income."

Barney said he does not recommend attempting to become a full-time online auctioneer with eBay without learning the basics first.

"It's like driving a car," Barney said. "It's easy to do but if no one shows you how to drive, you could end up in an accident that costs you time and money to fix."

This should not be taken as discouragement to start working with online auctions.

It is rather easy to get started in the process and become acquainted with the techniques.

With a little homework, access to an Internet-ready computer, and some basic computer knowledge, anyone can be on their way to becoming a member of the fastest growing community in the Canada and the U.S.

"Why wait to win the lottery," Barney said, "when selling on eBay is like winning the lotto every day."

17 stabbed in rampage

Man goes on knifing spree in Tokyo, 7 dead

A man plowed into shoppers with a truck yesterday in Tokyo and then stabbed 17 people within minutes, killing at least seven of them in a grisly attack.

The lunchtime violence in the Akihabara district, a popular electronics and video game area, sent thousands of people fleeing.

The assault, which occurred on the seventh anniversary of a mass stabbing at a Japanese elementary school, was the latest in a series of knife attacks that have stoked fears of rising violent crime in Japan.

A 25-year-old man, Tomohiro Kato, was arrested with blood on his face.

"The suspect told police that he came to Akihabara to kill people," said Jiro Akaogi, a spokesman for the Tokyo Metropolitan Police Department. "He said he was tired of life. He said he was sick of everything."

Suicide bomber strikes U.S. base in Iraq

A suicide truck bomber who concealed his explosives under tanned animal hides struck an American patrol base yesterday in northern Iraq, killing one soldier and wounding 20 other people, U.S. and Iraqi officials said.

Eighteen of the wounded were American soldiers and two were Iraqi contractors working at the base in Tamim province, according to a brief statement from the military.

Earlier, the U.S. military issued a statement saying an American soldier died Saturday when his vehicle was struck by a bomb in eastern Baghdad. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Blast traps Ukraine miners

A powerful explosion tore through a mine in eastern Ukraine early yesterday, trapping at least 37 miners who had been making repairs to improve safety conditions in the mine, officials said. Four workers above ground were injured.

Rescue teams heard the voices of some of the trapped miners after attempting to get to them through a damaged shaft, Deputy Prime Minister Oleksandr Turchynov told Ukrainian television.

"There is hope they are alive," he said, adding the ventilation system in the mine was still working.

The methane explosion, one of the most powerful in the country's mining history, tore through the Karl Marx mine in the eastern city of Donetsk around 5 a.m., trapping the miners about 1,000 metres underground, officials said.

Laura Bush in Kabul

Visit to highlight nation's progress

U.S. first lady Laura Bush, on a mission to highlight signs of rebirth in war-weary Afghanistan, ventured outside Kabul yesterday to an area that symbolizes both the destruction of war and Afghanistan's attempt at rebirth.

Bush, on her third unannounced visit to the country, flew into the Afghan capital then immediately boarded a helicopter for a 50-minute flight to Bamiyan province, the farthest she has travelled from Kabul.

Her chopper touched down in a dusty field at a provincial reconstruction team compound operated by New Zealand. From there she could see the empty niches in a cliffside where two giant Buddha statues once stood.

They were carved into the sandstone cliffs more than 2,000 years ago, but were demolished by the Taliban, which considered them idolatrous and anti-Muslim, in March 2001.

Bush next met with female trainees at Afghanistan's National Police Bamiyan Regional Training Center.

The first lady's visit comes ahead of a donors conference in Paris, where the U.S. hopes billions of dollars in international aid will be pledged to help the embattled nation.

Afghan BBC journalist found dead

An Afghan journalist working for the BBC World Service was found dead in southern Afghanistan with a gunshot wound to the head yesterday, the BBC and Afghan officials said.

The British Broadcasting Corp. said Abdul Samad Rohani went missing in the town of Lashkar Gar in Helmand province on Saturday. His body was found in a cemetery the following day.

Rohani was the Helmand reporter for the BBC World Service's Pashto language service.

The Helmand provincial police chief, Mohammad Hussein Andiwal, said officials were investigating the death and had not named any suspects. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spacewalk a success

Discovery crew collect debris, replace gas tank

time to leave

» Discovery and its crew leave the space station Wednesday.

The U.S. space shuttle Discovery's astronauts breezed through their third and final spacewalk yesterday, replacing an empty gas tank at the international space station and collecting a sample of dusty debris.

Spacewalkers Michael Fossum and Ronald Garan wrapped up their work so quickly that Mission Control threw in some extra chores.

The highlight of the 6½-hour spacewalk, for Garan, was a long ride on the space station's robot arm that swung him 24 metres out from the orbiting complex. He carried an empty nitrogen gas tank from one side of the station to the other, then returned with a full tank and plugged it in for use in the coolant system.

With the Earth 338 kilometres below and the space station the equivalent of eight storeys away, it was a ride like no other. NASA called it the windshield-wiper manoeuvre. It took Garan over Australia and the South Pacific, over Peru and beyond. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Stranded divers face Komodo dragon threat

A group of European scuba divers swept away in strong currents scrambled onto a remote Indonesian island only to face another threat — a Komodo dragon.

A port official said yesterday the divers from Britain, France and Sweden were able to scare off the giant lizard by pelting it with rocks and pieces of wood.

He said Komodo dragons often come out when they smell something new, including humans, whom they've been known to kill.

The five divers were swept away by treacherous currents after plunging into the water from their wooden boat on Thursday afternoon.

They hit shore 12 hours later, after drifting about 30 kilometres in shark-infested waters.

The divers spent one night on Rinca Island before they were rescued.

Talks on oil crisis

G8 vows better energy efficiency, green technology

record crude oil jump

» Oil prices made a massive 8 per cent gain Friday to $138.54 US on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Faced with record-high oil prices, the world's leading economies and oil consumers yesterday pledged greater investment in energy efficiency and green technologies to control their spiralling thirst for petroleum.

Energy ministers from the Group of Eight countries, joined by China, India and South Korea, also urged oil producers to boost output, which has stalled at about 85 million barrels a day since 2005. The 11 countries account for 65 per cent of the world's energy consumption,

But the focus of yesterday's meeting was on what wealthy countries should do to rein in consumption, while reducing carbon emissions.

Energy experts say most producers have little ability to expand output. The exception is Saudi Arabia, which is producing about 9.4 million barrels a day and has the ability to increase by about two million barrels a day, but has not done so.

Jobless rate sticks at 6.1%

part-time

» 40,600 part-time jobs were added, mostly for women and students.

The Canadian economy's job-creation machine stalled in May, keeping the unemployment rate at 6.1 per cent and narrowly averting an outright loss of jobs through a massive increase in part-time work.

The fact there was no overall loss in jobs, with a net 8,400 created in May, showed the economy may be slowing but is not in recession, said Bank of Montreal economist Douglas Porter. "If we were in a recession we'd be seeing monthly losses of 30,000 and 40,000 jobs and 50,000 jobs, three or four months or five months in a row."

Labour Congress backs GM workers

next phase

» Keith Osborne, truck plant chairman of CAW Local 222, said the union will launch the next phase of its action early in the week.

Canadian Labour Congress president Ken Georgetti pledged the support of his 3.2 million members to General Motors workers in Oshawa yesterday as their round-the-clock blockade of the company's Canadian headquarters entered its fifth day.

Georgetti urged unions across the country to get behind the GM workers, saying they weren't the only ones under assault.

"We're losing jobs by the bucketfuls because (corporations) can exploit workers in China, Vietnam, Indonesia and Mexico, and we're letting them do that," Georgetti said.

A three-hour motorcade circled GM's Oshawa truck and car plants on Saturday.

Podolski powers Germany

Poland-native scores twice for Germans

GERMANY 2 POLAND 0

Lukas Podolski scored both goals yesterday to give three-time champion Germany a perfect start at the European Championship with a 2-0 win in Klagenfurt, Austria, over his native Poland, which remained winless against the Germans.

Podolski was born in Poland but came to Germany and took citizenship. Normally a striker, Podolski got to start as a left midfielder and justified the selection by scoring in the 20th minute. Mario Gomez flicked the ball through the defence to Miroslav Klose, who squared to Podolski with goalkeeper Artur Boruc scrambling to get back.

In the 73rd, Bastian Schweinsteiger shook off a half-hearted challenge by Pawel Golanski and fed Klose, who mis-kicked the ball but it bounced to Podolski, who volleyed it in from close range.

Gomez did better in setting up his teammates than finishing himself. Early in the game, Klose used a perfect through ball from Michael Ballack to feed Gomez, but the striker could not prod the ball in despite sliding at the far post. Later, he collected a good cross from Clemens Fritz but shot wide. Klose, with his back to the net, tried to touch the ball in but missed.

Poland, winless against Germany in 15 previous games, came out with determination and ambition to wipe out 75 years of frustration and nearly scored a couple minutes into the match. Germany goalkeeper Jens Lehmann collided with central defender Per Mertesacker and the ball rolled to Jacek Krzynowek, but his shot went high.

Wojciech Lobodzinski, who sent several useful crosses from the right in the first half, found Maciej Zuravski in the 36th, but he drove his volley way over the crossbar.

With Germany seeking to secure victory, Philipp Lahm charged down the right and crossed to Ballack, who sent a volley but Boruc made a tremendous save by tipping the ball over with his left hand in the 70th.

Dariusz Dudka of Poland and his teammates did everything they could but were unable to slow down Germany's Lukas Podolski, who scored both goals in a 2-0 German win in their UEFA EURO 2008 Group B match in Klagenfurt, Austria.

hooligans

» Outside the stadium in Klagenfurt, Austria, police detained about 100 hooligans for shouting Nazi-like slogans. There were no reports of violence against police, but the Austria Press Agency said several German and Polish fans clashed after Germany took a 1-0 lead in the first half.

Croatian penalty spoils host team's debut

Austria fights hard, but unable to score equalizer

CROATIA 1 AUSTRIA 0

Luka Modric scored from the penalty spot yesterday to give Croatia a 1-0 win over co-host Austria at the European Championship in Vienna.

Modric put his team ahead in the fourth minute of the Group B match after Rene Aufhauser brought down Ivica Olic in the area. Modric and Olic combined down the left wing from a throw-in and took the ball into the box before Aufhauser ran across and knocked down Olic as he went past. Dutch referee Pieter Vink awarded the penalty and Austria defender Emanuel Pogatetz was then given a yellow card for protesting.

With goalkeeper Juergen Macho diving to his right, Modric sent the ball low and into the middle of the net.

The early goal lifted Croatia and Austria struggled to contain the deft interplay in central midfield between Modric and captain Niko Kovac, with Darijo Srna down the right flank the main recipient of their wide passes.

Srna tormented Austria's three-man defence once Modric, in particular, had threaded the ball through the opposing five-man midfield. Olic also caused problems up front, drifting across the field to stretch the defence.

Playing in front of 54,000 fans at Ernst Happel Stadium, Austria lifted the intensity of its challenges and started to receive more possession, but Croatia kept its shape to ensure the hosts took only long-range shots.

The hosts dominated late, but Croatia was able to hold on for the win.

Juergen Saemuel sent a 25-yard shot straight to Croatia goalkeeper Stipe Pletikosa, while Sebastian Proedl couldn't keep his 35-yard shot from flying over the cross-bar midway through the first half.

Austria had more success as the first half wore on and when the ball was shifted to the flanks, where left midfielder Ronald Gercaliu and defender Joachim Standfest sent in crosses that troubled Pletikosa.

Austria had a great chance to score in the 40th when Aufhauser put the ball in behind left back Danijel Pranjic and Martin Harnik crossed across the face of goal to try to find Saemuel but Pletikosa intercepted.

Pogatetz had moments earlier fouled Olic near the Austrian box and was lucky not to receive a second yellow card. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Croatia's Luka Modric scored the lone goal in his country's 1-0 win over Austria in the Euro Cup yesterday.

Favourites take Euro's opening games

Portugal, Czechs off to winning start

Group A favourites Portugal and the Czech Republic recorded wins Saturday on the opening day of the European Championship, putting both teams on the way to the quarter-finals.

Portugal had a goal from Pepe disallowed for offside in the first half, but the defender put in another in the second half to help the 2006 World Cup semifinalists to a 2-0 win over Turkey in Geneva. Raul Meireles added the second goal in injury time.

Sverkos

The Czechs spoiled co-host Switzerland's party with a 1-0 win in Basel when Vaclav Sverkos scored his first international goal in the 71st minute in only his third appearance. Sverkos ran onto Tomas Galasek's header after beating the offside trap and finished to the left of goalkeeper Diego Benaglio.

"It was the best moment of my football career," Sverkos said. "I'd be happy to score more goals."

Despite not playing his best, Cristiano Ronaldo had some of Portugal's most dangerous chances but failed to capitalize. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jays end four-game losing skid

Wells homers to help Halladay record victory

BLUE JAYS 5 ORIOLES 4

ADRIAN WYLD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Blue Jays outfielder Brad Wilkerson slides safely into home plate as he steals home past Baltimore Orioles catcher Ramon Hernandez during yesterday's game. The Jays won 5-4.

As he so often does, Roy Halladay set the Toronto Blue Jays right yesterday afternoon, this time with some timely help from a resurgent Vernon Wells and the offence.

Wells homered, Rod Barajas doubled in a run and scored on Marco Scutaro's sacrifice fly in a pivotal three-run sixth, helping to end an ugly four-game losing streak with a 5-4 comeback win over the Baltimore Orioles.

A pair of home runs by Luke Scott, including a tiebreaking two-run shot in the top of the sixth off Halladay (8-5), put the visitors up 4-2 and in position for a three-game sweep.

But the Blue Jays (33-32) responded immediately with the three-spot against reliever Matt Albers (3-2) to collect just their second win in eight games before a sun-baked crowd of 25,365.

"Having some tough losses on the road, then coming in here and having a couple of more tough losses, when you're playing well and losing games it definitely makes things tougher," said Halladay, who gave up four runs in 7⅔ innings. "To be able to have a game like today where we did battle back, we did overcome some things, is good for us and hopefully it can carry us forward."

The bullpen coughed up four of the previous six losses, but did the job this time, with Scott Downs retiring Scott in the eighth before B.J. Ryan closed things out in a 1-2-3 ninth for his 13th save.

He looked strong against the Orioles lineup after blowing his last two opportunities and is ready to put the rough stretch behind him.

"There's no use even thinking about it or talking about it," Ryan said of the losses. "It dwells with other people longer than it does with me."

Wilson set to sign on with Leafs

Expected to ink a four-year, $5.6M deal to coach team

Ron Wilson's first head coaching job was with a no-talent expansion team in Anaheim. Next up was a team that was perennially out of the playoffs in Washington. Then he took over a San Jose club that was in complete disarray, one that would undergo a GM change two months after he was hired.

So now, he figures he's ready for the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Wilson will be in town this week, likely tomorrow, to put his signature on a four-year deal — believed to be worth $5.6 million — to take over coaching the club he broke into the NHL with in the 1977-78 season.

"I've been a Toronto Maple Leaf fan my whole life," said Wilson, reached in Hilton Head, S.C. "I was lucky enough to have played for them for a short period of time, and how many kids when they're seven or eight years old dream to be a Toronto Maple Leaf and wish they could wear No. 14 and eventually do that."

Wilson, 53, was the only candidate interim GM Cliff Fletcher had contacted, and the Leafs were the only team Wilson spoke to after he was fired by San Jose.

"I think he'll do a great job," said Fletcher, reached in Phoenix. "He's got a great track record, I fully believe he's the right man for the job at this time.

Nadal dominates Federer in French finals

Spaniard takes title in straight sets

By the fourth game, Rafael Nadal had Roger Federer kicking the clay in frustration. By the second set, the normally stoic Federer was screaming at himself.

The drubbing went on from there. Nadal won his fourth consecutive French Open title in a rout yesterday, again spoiling Federer's bid to complete a career Grand Slam.

Nadal

Dominating the world's No. 1 player with astounding ease, Nadal swept six consecutive games early in the match to take control and won 6-1, 6-3, 6-0.

It was a humbling defeat for Federer, but for the No. 2-ranked Nadal, it was merely another in a series of dominating wins. He lost only 41 games in seven matches at this year's French Open.

The Spaniard became the second man to win four consecutive French Open titles. Bjorn Borg did it in 1978-81.

Nadal improved to 28-0 at Roland Garros, where he has won 84 of 91 sets.

Kubica claims Canadian GP

Hamilton takes out Raikkonen

Robert Kubica and the BMW Sauber team have arrived.

Kubica jumped into the lead after favourites Lewis Hamilton and Kimi Raikkonen were taken out in a pit lane incident and cruised to his first career Formula One win by 16.4 seconds over BMW Sauber teammate Nick Heidfeld.

The 23-year-old Polish driver who had left Circuit Gilles Villeneuve in Montreal on a stretcher after a spectacular crash a year ago also took over the lead in F1 drivers' standings after seven races with 42 points — four ahead of Hamilton and Ferrari's Felipe Massa, and seven ahead of Raikkonen, also of Ferrari.

"It's a great atmosphere here in Canada and there are a lot of Polish fans and a lot of fans cheering for our team, so it's fantastic for me to win here, especially with what happened last year," he said.

BMW Sauber driver Robert Kubica of Poland celebrates winning the Canadian Grand Prix in Montreal yesterday.

David Coulthard, the Scottish veteran who got his first career points in the 1994 Canadian Grand Prix, finished third for Red Bull Racing.

Before the race, Kubica was known in Canada mainly for two things: Taking the job of Jacques Villeneuve when the Iberville, Que., driver was injured midway through the 2006 season; and his horrific crash at last year's race that destroyed all but the cockpit of his car. THE CANADIAN PRESS

No answers for Big Brown's flop

The morning after the Belmont Stakes, Big Brown stopped to pose for photographers as if he had won the Triple Crown. Everyone except the horse knew otherwise.

Trainer Rick Dutrow Jr. was a no-show, leaving questions and few answers about what happened to Big Brown in Saturday's 1½-mile Belmont. The Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner was eased up by jockey Kent Desormeaux in the stretch, ending up last, beaten by eight other horses.

The bay colt faced the cameras alone yesterday, except for exercise rider Michelle Nevin — and she wasn't talking.

Co-owner Michael Iavarone said Big Brown had a thorough examination after the race and again yesterday morning.

"There's nothing physically that's shown up," he said, speaking by cellphone. "I'm as confused as anybody."

Hats off to Ontario, Quebec

Agreement confronts global warming issues

EARTH TONES
SOPHIA DORE & ANDREW LAURSEN
earthtones.metro@gmail.com

Our hats are off this week to the legislatures of Ontario and Quebec. By agreeing in principle to a cap-and-trade policy for carbon emissions, the two largest provinces and major producers of greenhouse gases have placed Canada, as a whole, on a better path.

These types of programs have grown in Europe and appear to be effective in providing economic incentive to reduce industrial emissions. And, with both presidential candidates to the south of us endorsing some form of cap-and-trade programs, it appears the U.S. may be heading this way as well.

The agreement between Ontario and Quebec has been denounced by the federal government, perhaps as much for the inherent rebuke as for the break with federal policy (of having no clear policy). Born from frustration of Canada's retreat from international commitments under the Kyoto Protocol, we are seeing smaller jurisdictions fill the void in leadership.

The city of Toronto, as an example, is a leading member of the C40 Large Cities Climate Change Leadership Group, with Mayor David Miller assuming the chair. This group of municipalities from around the world is working together to exchange ideas and technologies for reducing carbon footprint. Toronto has been a leader in developing a strategy for reducing greenhouse gas emissions and promoting green building technologies. There is still room for improvement in public transit and reducing motor vehicle traffic, but Toronto is moving in the right direction.

We are by no means apologizing for the lack of leadership from the federal government, but perhaps leadership from cities and provinces is the way it should be. Successfully confronting global warming requires a cultural shift more than regulation (although there is an important role for regulatory agencies), and the federal government really is not an agent of cultural change.

Cities and provinces provide the services that are most related to how we live. The way a city is planned and developed plays a major role in the culture of that city. We have seen how revitalization projects can dramatically alter the nature of a city in a short period of time. Decisions about zoning, architecture and public transit contribute strongly to the carbon footprint of a city. Municipal governments, then, should be leaders in the required cultural shift.

Provinces provide funding for health care and education. With a growing awareness of the links between environmental degradation and health problems, provincial governments have a vested interest in promoting environmental protection and transforming practices within their borders. In partnership with cities and boards of education, the province also has the tools to promote educational awareness through environmental science programs in schools. These are the places where cultural transformations happen most rapidly.

So while we believe the federal government should be more active in promoting environmentally sustainable practices in Canada, including practices to reduce greenhouse gases, Canadians need not wait for the leadership to come from Ottawa. The changes in lifestyle necessary for reducing our footprint must be fostered locally.

Andrew Laursen is an assistant professor at Ryerson University. Sophia Dore is an environmental scientist with Conestoga-Rovers & Associates.

Hot tips to cool warming

It really is easy to help make a difference for the environment by simply adjusting what you already do everyday. Looking at the main rooms in your home that consume energy, produce waste and use water is the best place to start.

Here are some tips to help you along the way:

» A LITTLE LESS hot water can help do a lot of good. Doing your laundry with detergents efficient in cold water helps you save energy by using less hot water. If all Canadians washed in cold water for a year, we'd save enough energy to light up to 2.5 million homes for an entire year.

» A SHORT CYCLE could help in the long run.

The Canadian Energy Efficiency Alliance recommends doing your laundry on a "quick" cycle, which cleans your clothes with the same results, just by using less energy and water. Similarly, dishwashers can run on a shorter cycle, some with even an "economy" drying setting.

Overall, less energy used in the home makes a difference for the environment and the cheque book. NEWS CANADA

Ways to help reduce your carbon footprint

By now most people are familiar with the notion of global warming.

It's a large-scale phenomenon, but one that places responsibility on individuals to assess what impact their activities have on the environment, better known as their "carbon footprint."

Reducing this footprint may seem daunting at first, but here are some simple tips to help:

Reducing your carbon footprint may seem daunting, but can be accomplished by following some simple tips.

» ONE OF THE easiest changes you can make to your home is with lighting. By switching to energy-efficient CFL bulbs you can save up to 78 per cent on energy costs. CFL's have the added advantage of lasting up to 10 times longer than traditional bulbs and because you won't have to replace them as often, you'll create less landfill.

» ANOTHER GREAT WAY to save energy is by installing dimmer switches in your home. Dimmers can reduce energy consumption by up to 20 per cent. Similarly, motion sensor lights on the exterior of your home can provide energy savings by switching lights off automatically when not detecting movement.

» TIMERS ARE ALSO an effective way to reduce energy consumption as they can be programmed to use electricity only when it's needed.

» LOOK FOR Energy Star rated lights. These lights are the most energy-efficient models available and can also be found in many décor options to suit your own personal taste.

» INSTALL CEILING FANS. During hot weather a ceiling fan will create a cool breeze and keep the air circulating in your home.

» AN EVENING BARBECUE is a great alternative to using the oven or stove, which both generate heat on an already hot day. You can also use your microwave or toaster oven in place of the stove or oven.

» DRY LAUNDRY ON a clothesline to reduce energy consumption. Available exclusively at Canadian Tire is the innovative WallFix clothes dryer. Clothes dryers use about 900 kilowatt hours of electricity a year on average. By hanging just 25 per cent of those laundry loads out to dry, you could save about $30 a year on electricity bills.

'Energy revolution' would cost $45 trillion: Study

The world needs to invest $45 trillion US in energy in coming decades, build some 1,400 nuclear power plants and vastly expand wind power in order to halve greenhouse gas emissions by 2050, according to an energy study released Friday.

The report by the Paris-based International Energy Agency envisions an "energy revolution" that would greatly reduce the world's dependence on fossil fuels while maintaining steady economic growth.

"Meeting this target of 50 per cent cut in emissions represents a formidable challenge, and we would require immediate policy action and technological transition on an unprecedented scale," IEA executive director Nobuo Tanaka said.

A UN-network of scientists concluded last year that emissions have to be cut by at least half by 2050 to avoid an increase in world temperatures of between 2 C and 2.4 C above pre-18th century levels.

Scientists say temperature increases beyond that could trigger devastating effects, such as widespread loss of species, famines and droughts, and swamping of heavily populated coastal areas by rising oceans. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Aiming to help doctors

Medical-practice consultants aid those who heal

By MARTY YORK
Metro Toronto

Doctors, generally, are pretty sharp. Those prefixes in front of their names are there for a reason. They excel academically, or at least have at some point of their lives.

Having said this, it also is fair to suggest that, generally, a large number of Canadian doctors lack business acumen.

"That certainly appears to be the case," acknowledges Jivi Khehra, a medical-practice consultant for more than 14 years. "More and more doctors seem to be getting business degrees, but the majority of doctors who run private practices in Canada appear to be in need of definite assistance when it comes to running their businesses."

Khehra, who operates in New Westminster, B.C., is by no means knocking Canadian doctors for their business shortcomings.

"It's easily understandable," she says. "I can't tell you how many doctors I've met over the years who are so focused on their practices and on helping people that they simply don't have the time to properly run their businesses. Depending on where they are, doctors have anywhere from 1,500 to 2,200 patients. There are many … (who) simply haven't had time to make themselves aware of how to operate efficiently."

Enter medical-practice consultants.

"We're like any other business consultants," she says, "except that we deal with people who often don't think of their practices as businesses."

Schooling artists on graffiti

Art form not just for vandals, says pro painter

By RAFAEL BRUSILOW
for Metro Toronto

Once considered the juvenile pursuit of vandals and miscreants, graffiti art today is hip, artistically rich and most important of all, professional.

Toronto-bred graffiti artist Mediah (pronounced with a silent h) has been doing graffiti since the tender age of 15 and says the skills he learned doing graffiti gave him the professional skills he relies on today as a digital media designer with his own company, IAH Digital.

"Graffiti made me a professional and gave me the notoriety to jumpstart my artistic career," Mediah said.

He started out painting murals on the RT line in Scarborough when he discovered the joy of painting with a spray can and for him it was never about lashing out or damaging property.

"I was always more attracted to the artwork than the vandalism. That's what my goal always was — to do graffiti art, not just graffiti graffiti," Mediah said.

Mediah, 29, still regularly does a lot of graffiti work — just recently he painted part of a bridge in Montreal and he stays in touch with other graffiti artists who share news about commissioned projects and legal graffiti spots.

RAFAEL BRUSILOW/FOR METRO TORONTO

Toronto graffiti artist and digital media designer Mediah sprays his vision on an outdoor canvas.

A multitude of options exist for paid graffiti work, Mediah says. From corporate murals to ad gigs and commissioned art pieces, a talented graffiti artist can make a living selling their work or, in the case of graphic design, even their artistic expertise.

"It's absolutely unlimited in what you can do artistically," Mediah said.

Getting the younger generation involved in graffiti is important to Mediah, so every year he and long-time collaborator Elicser (pronounced elixir) run a three-day workshop for 60 kids from high schools across the GTA to come and learn about graffiti and put their skills to the test in a safe, fun way.

At the workshop this year the two virtuosos taught kids about graffiti history, techniques, specifics of different nozzles and brands and most importantly, not to paint illegally.

"We wanted to show kids the artistic side of graffiti, not the derogatory vandalism side," Mediah said.

For Elicser, the reward is in seeing someone's artistic side blossom for the first time.

"Every year we find a wicked, awesome painter. You'll ask if they've done it before and they'll say 'No.' It's great to see those hidden gems when they happen," Elicser said.

the right way

» The program, in its fifth year, was organized by the TD Canada Trust Toronto Jazz Festival as a way to meld art and music and reach out to the Toronto community. Program co-ordinator Dylan Taylor says Mediah and Elicser's commitment to teaching kids the right way to do graffiti is always a big hit with participating kids.

Hundreds audition for TV dance competition

By RICK McGINNIS
Metro Toronto

The dancers sprawled all over the lobby of the John Bassett Theatre have made it; they began lining up early this torrid Sunday morning outside the Metro Toronto Convention Centre to get a spot in the auditions for CTV's Canadian franchise of So You Think You Can Dance, and after facing the first panel of judges with a minute-long routine, they've survived the first cut.

"It went really well. It was so nerve-rracking," says Tamina Pollack-Paris of Toronto, who brought all of her training — "Hip hop, jazz, ballet, Irish dancing, all that stuff..." — to Rihanna's Breaking Dishes.

"It was pretty tough competition," says Christopher Guglich, also from Toronto. "It's really, really stiff competition. I was surprised — they were cutting people that you really would not expect to be cut."

The carpet in the theatre lobby is covered with clothes and bags, socks and shoes and pieces of paper. Dancers sit with their legs extended in fierce angles as they fill out the paperwork that will follow them along to the next step of the competition, before handing it all in to the staff sitting at laptops along the walls.

Dwayne Anderson goes by the name Rudeboy. The Toronto dancer has brought "12 years of hip hop, dabbled in jazz, African, reggae, a little bit of modern, classical Indian — a whole bunch of stuff." He says surviving the auditions is a mental challenge as much as a physical one.

"I just had a mindset of just going through it, having fun, no pressure. The people who were having pressure were the ones who didn't actually get through because they were putting so much pressure on themselves and dance is 90 per cent mental."

Dancer Tre Armstrong is one of the show's celebrity judges and her job begins in earnest tomorrow, when the next round of eliminations begins. "Personality is what the show is about," she says. "Dancing is what we've built it around, but you can be the wickedest dancer and have the worst, bland personality onscreen, and it's gonna be — 'Sorry, we so want you, but holy freak, show me something or else no one's going to vote for you.' It depends on who you are. If you're a great dancer, sometimes your personality doesn't have to be so hot, the dancing will speak for itself. But if you're a mediocre dancer, you'd better start learning how to smile, you'd better start learning how to laugh and make people laugh."

By noon, most of the dancers have made it into the theatre, while their friends and family wait outside on the street in the sweltering heat.

Dwayne "Rudeboy" Anderson dances for CTV's cameras after making it through the first round of tryouts for So You Think You Can Dance in Toronto.

More than 800 dancers have been processed so far, with more to come — the biggest numbers so far. Pollack-Paris is on her way home to get ready for the next round of eliminations tomorrow. "I'm ready. I'm going to go to bed early, get my protein shakes. I'm ready Toronto to kill it."

Hot style to cool down

As temperatures rise, chill out with these tips

So! There's a heat wave upon us and you're looking around your space thinking; 'Blimey; 'What do I do to lighten up, and how can I make my world that little bit fresher? Without, ahem, breaking the bank?'

Well, panic not — we're here to help. Stick with us, kids, and we'll soon have you refreshed, invigorated ... and a whole load cooler. Literally and visually.

First things first. It's time to pare back. Tear down those thick winter curtains and replace them with lighter voiles that'll visually freshen and allow summer breezes to float through your home. And, while you're at it, peel back those chunky wool throws, knobbly cushions and heavy bed dressings and seasonally adjust your environment.

As replacements, opt for cooler cotton or silk Pashmina style throws and lightweight foam-filled cushions instead of feather — each far more comfortable during hotter climes.

If you really want to affect full seasonal adjustment then perhaps it's time to paint out the very warming wintry colours you chose at the end of last summer!

However, if you don't want to completely redecorate, then by simply adding an accent wall in a cool shade like Dulux 'Big Chill' (it's baby blue!) or Dulux 'Early Frost' (a soft yet crisp green note) you can achieve surprisingly cooling results. Either of these selections would provide the perfect foil to balance existing mocha, caramel or even chocolate shades.

COLIN & JUSTIN'S INTERIOR DIVINE

Colin and Justin's Top Five Cool Downs:

ONE: Invest in a sexy fan; 'The Hampton Bay Retro', a gorgeous oscillating design finished in chrome, costs just $49.95. Available from Home Depot it can be used on your desk top or can be adjusted to become a tall floor standing model.

TWO: Cast off those heavy layers and lighten up your soft furnishings with lightweight summer alternatives.

THREE: Accent walls rule! One or two paler walls will — visually — cool things down as the mercury ascends. Try light reflective paints by Rona, The Canadian How To People to further open up space.

FOUR: Mirror and mirrored furnishings will bounce light and brighten up even the dullest interior. Try tanyas.ca for a great choice.

FIVE: Invest in a cute wee water feature! You'd be amazed at the cooling power of a trickling indoor fountain. Click onto tropicsnorthstudios.com for streams of inspiration.

Finally, set your new scheme to a little music! And take it from us — nothing (of an aural nature!) cools more than Serve Chilled '08 by Hed Kandi.

Featuring high on our 'at home' soundtrack, it's a refreshingly relaxing vibe that'll help you shift down a few gears as the temperatures rise! Chill-ax and enjoy!

Colin & Justin's The Home Show, airs Tuesdays at 11 p.m. and Saturdays at 4 p.m. ET on HGTV. www.hgtv.ca

Beckham to appear on Oprah

Victoria Beckham is going to attempt to woo U.S. TV audiences into supporting her fashion label by appearing on the Oprah Winfrey Show later this year, imdb.com reports.

Beckham

The former Spice Girl has taken up the offer to appear on the talk show in a bid to prove she is not just a soccer star's wife, reports Britain's Sunday Mirror newspaper.

A source tells the publication, "She's spoken to Oprah's TV firm Harpo and wants to prove she isn't just David Beckham's wife but has a career in fashion."

A Simpsons-less future?

IDIOT BOX
RICK McGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

D'OH: Last week, I wrote a post about The Simpsons' ascension into the record books, signing with Fox for a 20th season that will tie the animated sitcom with Gunsmoke, the longest running show in prime time, and about the show's voice cast bit of brinksmanship that rewarded them with big paycheques for the same season — some $400,000 US per episode for actors such as Dan Castellaneta, Julie Kavner, Hank Azaria and others.

Not long after I typed the last period on that piece, Verne Gay of Newsday's TV Zone wrote that the triumph could be short-lived. "With the 20th season, The Simpsons has perhaps become prohibitively expensive; it's sort of like that 15,000-pound Escalade collecting a mantle of dust in your garage because it costs $500 to fill up the tank..."

Gay points out, while the show has gotten more expensive to produce, it has shed more than half its viewers since its high-water mark 1998 season, dipping to an average of just 7.7 million viewers per episode. "What does all this mean?" Gay asks. "That as the audience declines, the show costs are going up.

> « If you spend more money than you make, you know what happens. »
> Former Tonight Show announcer Ed McMahon

"In television, that always spells one thing, and I'll spell it out for you now: Cancellation."

After receiving an ominous "No comment" from a PR exec at Fox, Gay lets us linger on that scenario, pregnant with its vision of a Simpsons-less future — except for the syndicated episodes running four times a day. I somehow wish the show's writers could keep this image in their minds, as it might inspire them to make a potential final season worthy of the show's reputation at its best. Or it will mean another dull but profitable movie. In either case, it's hard for me to summon up a convincing imitation of hope.

IT'S GOOD TO BE THE KING: Especially when, like Larry King, you can rely on your friends to make you look good by comparison. Wearing a neck brace for an unspecified injury, former Johnny Carson sidekick Ed McMahon appeared on King's CNN show last week to talk about the imminent foreclosure on his house, to pay for some $4.8 million in unpaid mortgage loans.

"If you spend more money than you make, you know what happens," said the new poster boy for financial imprudence in the age of the subprime crisis. "A couple of divorces thrown in, a few things like that."

McMahon's wife told King they were a victim of poor financial management, and that until she married Ed, she'd never even owned a house.

"I don't think you'll own one again," said King, twisting the knife. Backstage, he offered to let the couple sleep in his motor home when he wasn't using it, provided Ed follow him around laughing at his jokes.

Who says there's no love in showbiz?

Nashville Star
It's about time this show got a broadcast network berth after all those years on cable. Season six brings lots more changes to the country music competition: Duos and groups are now allowed, auditions are open to those 16 and up, and Billy Ray Cyrus takes over as host. The season premiere showcases the good, the bad and the ugly from the audition rounds — always fun. 9 PM on CH NBC

Mantracker
Don't even try to escape; you're going to lose. Horse-riding tracker Terry Grant returns for another season to hunt down more people who think they are smarter than he is. The tracking is a little more difficult since the contestants have studied previous shows and have picked up a few ways to elude Grant. But considering he's accompanied by a local who knows the terrain inside and out, they really don't have much of a chance. 9 PM on OLN instructions

The digits 1 through 9 will appear exactly once in each row, each column, and each zone. (A zone is an outlined 3x3 grid within the larger puzzle grid. There are nine of these zones in the puzzle.) Do not enter a digit into a box if it already appears elsewhere in the same 3x3 zone, or in the same row across the puzzle, or column down the puzzle.

Shania 'healing her broken heart'

Shania Twain opened up about her split from husband of 14 years, producer Robert "Mutt" Lange on her website recently, usmagazine.com reports.

"As I am sure you have seen or heard; I am going through a rough time personally in my life," the country singer wrote.

"I wanted you all to know that I could not be getting through this without you.

"Your letters, e-mails and words of encouragement give me strength. Your overwhelming support reminds me to smile, no matter how deep the pain and to always be grateful for all the beautiful blessings in my life. I have so much to say but I know the best way for me to speak is through my music.

"This is my therapy, my passion, and my love. I look forward to sharing it with all of you as I begin this new journey.

"I need some time to heal this broken heart but make no mistake; I will be back and hopefully stronger than ever."

Twain and Lange announced their split on May 15. They have a son, Eja D'Angelo, 6. Twain's secretary and house manager disputed people.com's report that she broke up the Timmins, Ont., native's marriage. Metro News Services

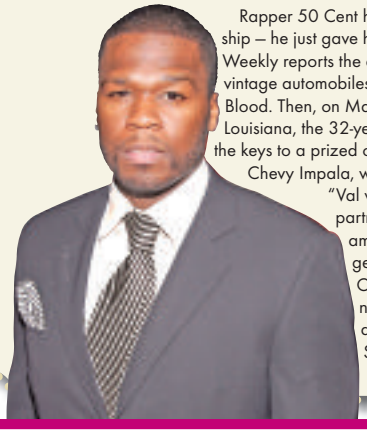
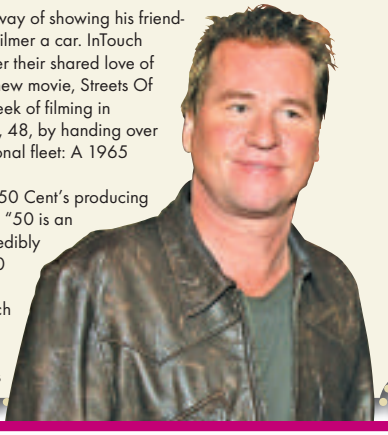
Fiddy doesn't nickel and dime





Rapper 50 Cent has an extravagant way of showing his friendship – he just gave his new co-star Val Kilmer a car. InTouch Weekly reports the duo first bonded over their shared love of vintage automobiles on the set of their new movie, Streets Of Blood. Then, on May 23, after just a week of filming in Louisiana, the 32-year-old surprised Val, 48, by handing over the keys to a prized classic from his personal fleet: A 1965 Chevy Impala, worth $100,000.

"Val was shocked," says 50 Cent's producing partner, Randall Emmett. "50 is an amazing guy and incredibly generous." Val and 50 Cent play cops in the new action flick, which also stars Sharon Stone. Metro News Services

Paris in a hurry to marry?

Paris Hilton's mother doesn't want her daughter to rush into marriage, reports femalefirst.co.uk.

Kathy Hilton thinks Paris should take her time to decide whether Good Charlotte rocker Benji Madden is the man she wants to spend the rest of her life with, because they have only been together for a short time.

Kathy said: "They've only been dating for three months! But he's such a nice boy and they're really sweet together. He likes Paris for herself."

Paris recently revealed she thinks Benji is her "perfect match," saying she has never had such strong feelings for a man. She said: "He wants to get hitched and we've talked about it. I'd wear a beautiful white dress, probably Dolce and Gabbana.

"We are the perfect match. We don't like being apart – we like to stay with each other as much as we can."

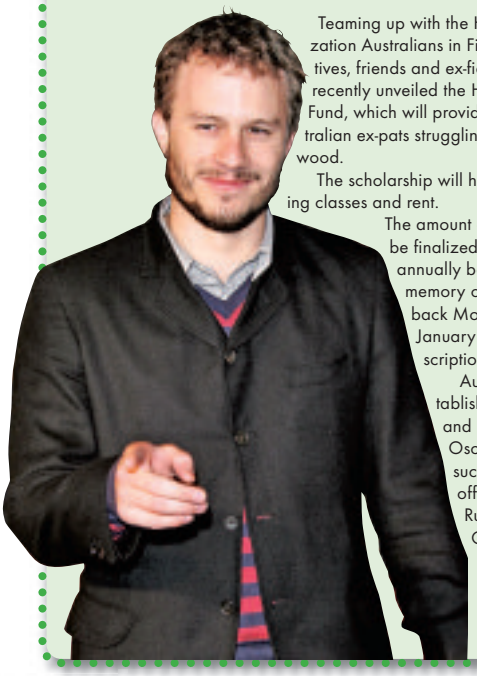
Ledger's legacy



Teaming up with the Hollywood-based organization Australians in Film, Heath Ledger's relatives, friends and ex-fiancée Michelle Williams recently unveiled the Heath Ledger Scholarship Fund, which will provide financial aid for Australian ex-pats struggling to break into Hollywood.

The scholarship will help cover the costs of acting classes and rent.

The amount of the award has yet to be finalized, but it will be doled out annually beginning in 2009 in memory of the 28-year-old Brokeback Mountain star, who died in January from an accidental prescription overdose.

Australians in Film was established seven years ago, and its emissaries include Oscar-owning Australians such as Nicole Kidman, Geoffrey Rush, Cate Blanchett, Russell Crowe and Mel Gibson.

Keeping them guessing

Angelina Jolie is refusing to reveal when her unborn twins are due – so she and partner Brad Pitt can keep the media guessing, according to imdb.com.

The actress was reported to be due on August 19, but her labour became the subject of a media frenzy last week when false reports claimed she had already given birth.

Jolie's legal team subsequently stepped in to set the record straight. According to the New York Times, her lawyers issued a statement saying someone posing as Jolie's assistant was behind the false birth claims. The statement read: "A random individual has engaged in a scheme to intentionally harm my client and deceive her fans, the public and the media through an illegal and tortuous impersonation of Ms Jolie's longtime assistant, Holly."

Regardless, stories have also surfaced claiming that Jolie will go into labour later this month. But Jolie herself insists she'll never give away the actual date.

She tells Vanity Fair magazine, "I don't want to say. If I do say, people will start stressing on our due date."

Charlize keeps it real

Actress Charlize Theron snubs the Hollywood party circuit to spend time with her friends, according to imdb.com.

The Monster star is often inundated with invites to celebrity parties, but she prefers to be with her real friends.

The South African actress tells Britain's GQ magazine, "I'd rather get drunk on red wine and talk with people I love. Friends come over and we cook, take long walks and hang out on the beach."
